

BABE A VICTIM OF ITALIAN VENDETTA.

Merzierio's Bullet, Aimed at His Enemy, Hit a Child.

ITS WOUND IS MORTAL.

Now the Father Is Pursuing the Murderer of His Little Girl.

Poor little Camillo Delaria celebrated her first Fourth of July in her adopted country, and was shot, and perhaps fatally.

The doctors at Fordham Hospital shake their heads gravely, and say they can offer no hope.

Camillo is two years of age, and lives at No. 528 East One Hundred and Forty-ninth street. She was playing in the street yesterday morning, watching the big boys and girls shooting firecrackers and toy pistols.

The little one screamed with delight when some one placed in her hand a little toy pistol and showed her how to press the trigger and make a noise.

Camille did not see the angry eyes. She thought the big man was celebrating the Fourth, too. She ran toward him with childish curiosity and trustfulness.

Thodore Merzierio, who held the pistol, did not see her. He saw only Nicola Angelino, the enemy whom he had been seeking nearly a year.

Camille went the big pistol again. Little Camille screamed again, but this time it was the scream of pain. A bullet, indeed, had pierced the little body, and the child lay on the sidewalk covered with blood that gushed from an ugly wound in the abdomen.

HIS MEMORY KEPT ALIVE WITH HOOKS.

Fishing Club Will Celebrate the Date of Jaeger's Odd Funeral.

As nearly as may be the grave of Philip Jaeger will be visited to-day by the members of the Sea Hunters' Fishing Club. Although Philip Jaeger died on the 13th of November, 1893, he was not buried until July 5, of the following year, and then in a most novel manner.

Philip Jaeger in life could not abide the idea that his body should be put into the ground, so he provided in his will that it should be cremated and that his friends, the members of the fishing club, should take these ashes down to the bay some fine afternoon, and after scattering them to the four winds of heaven, eat and drink and fish in his memory. He left money for this purpose, too.

Therefore, on the 5th of July, 1894, with a brass band, headed by President Gell carrying a canister in which were the ashes of Jaeger, the club members boarded the tug Surprise and steamed down the bay.

In a way the celebration to-day will be a burlesque on the events of five years ago. But Jaeger's man will drink a bumper to good old Jaeger's memory.

Capt. and Mrs. Van Raden Injured.

Mrs. Van Raden received several deep cuts on the head. She was picked up unconscious and was taken home in a hack. Captain Van Raden's nose will be a sight for many days.
